Peace College

PEACE INSTITUTE

When yesterday was tomorrow, I sat on my front porch, chin in hands, wondering where you were. How would I begin to find you? Would you want me as I wanted you? Would I be accepted as I am? Would any of the calls on the hall phone ever be for me? Would I go to lots of fraternity parties and dances, and know the chance thrill of dating some good-looking guy I'd never, ever seen before? Would I meet that guy who had been pre-formed in my subconscious since I first saw Robert Redford in Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid? Could I possibly come straight out of my high school and pass any test at Peace College? Would I be able to have a social life, and get my work done too? How would I be able to please my parents, my teachers, and myself all at once?

When yesterday was tomorrow, I was faced with countless questions. Today, do I really have the answers?

Peace College—

I first met you on the chalk-dusty bookshelf of my guidance counsellor's office. Tucked away between inch-thick copies of the Record of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Catalog of East Carolina University, you were intriguingly small and intimate even then. I had heard a lot about you; I wanted to know you better.

Peace College—

You became my acquaintance one crisp October morning entitled Visitation, and as you introduced me to your President and Dean, I knew you would be unique and personable among all the rest. You had girls in your midst who smiled and said “Hi!” like I was one of their own. From the warmth of their smiles, I knew I wanted to be.

Peace College—
You became a part of me
one sweaty, hot August morning—a morning too hot and frustrating to move luggage and climb stairs and say good-bye to Mama and Daddy with one last, brave kiss. I hope you missed that last kiss
as I turned and ran back up to that barren, dusty room that I then had to call home, because the inevitable tears that fell from those eyes were not to be seen by you, or by Mama and Daddy, or by that awkward stranger who was going to be living with me: Not to be seen, but understood.

In those hazy, confusing days, I never knew how important one measly letter could be. It was the vital link between the home I left and the home I was creating. Every letter was read and re-read until the inspiration and reassurance printed on those pages was faded and vague, but still remained a part of everyday's frustration, disappointment, and confusion. In the middle of that uproar, there was one haven of rest—one abstract reality to cling to: my faith and my hope.

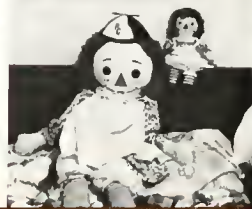

I'll never forget the knot of apprehension that settled in my stomach as I opened up my first blue book and began to recount the knowledge that culminated from long hours spent half-awake, half-asleep, but studying. Sometimes, after getting the blasted test back, I wondered if it would ever be worth it all. To escape, there was an endless stream of blind dates and nights at Darryl's and Hillsboro Square. Guys who were supposed to make my hopes and dreams come true slowly faded into fraternity sweat shirts, Embers Club glasses and State-Carolina football tickets. For some, Prince Charming became a reality; for others, he remained a dream.

My classmates—
It was comforting to know that you were always there.
So, we laughed together, we cried together. We partied and we studied together.
Then, there was a time to be alone, and rightfully so.
There was a time to find my own place in this small community—to search my heart for truths and fantasies, and to know the difference. Finally, there was a time to grow, and to feel the liberating pleasure of having grown.

Peace College—

You have become dear to me for all of these reasons, and because you have given me a cross-section of the world's greatest people to live with, and love with, and learn with.

And somewhere between orientation and graduation, you will become more than a school—more than a home. You will become a part of my values, my ideals: a part of my ability to be what I am. Peace College—

I'm looking forward to looking back.

It was a butterfly feeling to graduate from high school. I was happy because I was leaving my youth, and I figured that all my acne would clear up, and I'd become sophisticated, and when I came home for the holidays, no one would recognize me. But, I was sad, because how do you say goodbye to old friends? How do you say hello to new friends? I felt like I wanted to hang a sign around my neck that said, "Be nice to me. I need a friend." But I didn't have to. We had all left our old friends in the hope of making new ones. We all needed one another, and in happiness, trust, and youth, we found each other.

Student Life

New faces ... meetings ... President's Reception ... Convocation ... Beanie week ... new friends.

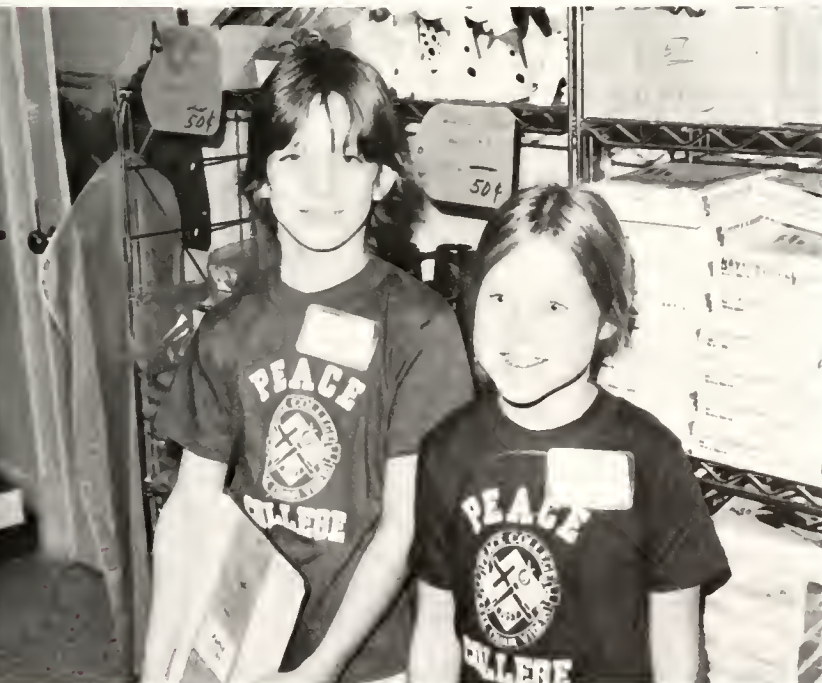

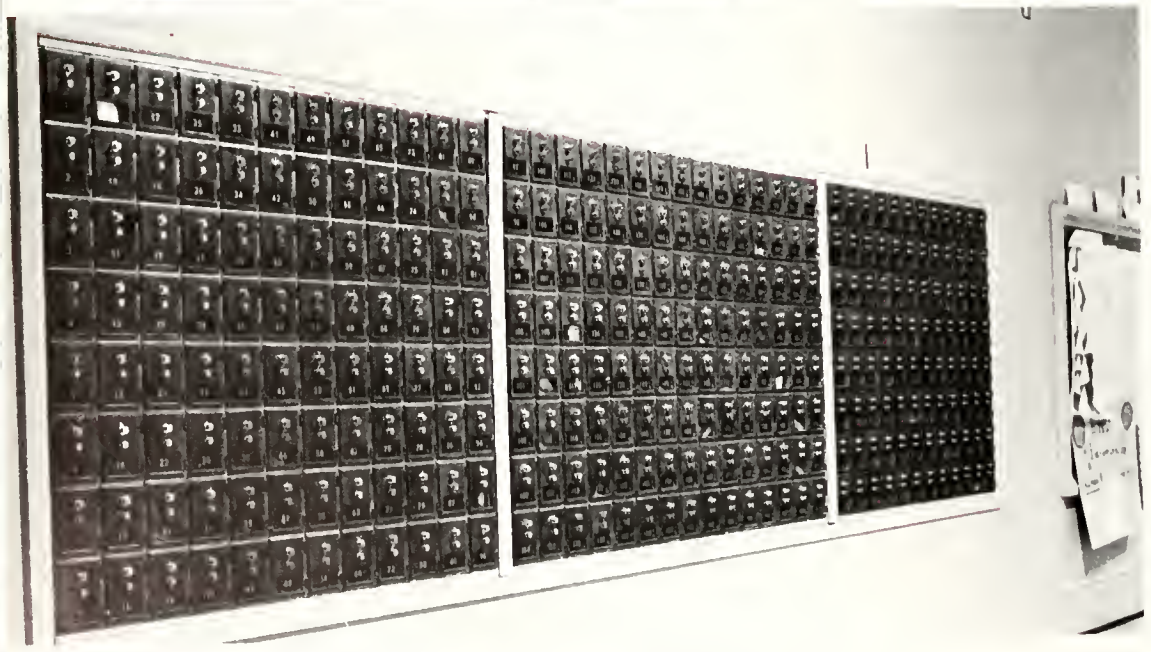

Peace

Statuesque against the sky,
 Renown for quality and beauty,
 Within her walls lies little of that
 For which she is named.
 No fault of her own—
 Her hands are bound.
 Each troubled heart
 Must stand alone,
 And face the toil
 That lies ahead.
 Please that you would grant to me
 One small treasure before I leave—
 Peace.

Betty Bradley
 1975

In the end, how do you say good-bye to old friends? Do you just pack-up and say so-long, and write it off as another fleeting period of life? No; you live the moment, the joy, the giggly happiness only once. You can't really say good-bye to old friends. Their memories go with you through all your yesterdays and into all your forevers.

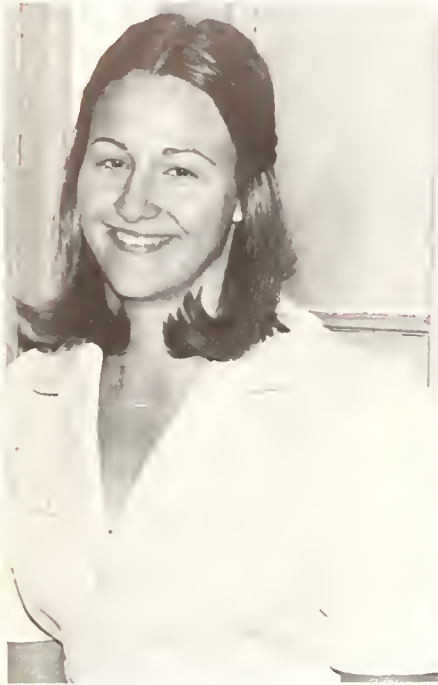

Honor

Webster's dictionary defines honor as "distinguished position" or "a mark of respect." But behind these stiff phrases, what does honor really mean? There are so many who have worked, and toiled, and gone unrecognized; but there are so many who have worked and been rewarded. Honor is the humbling sense of gratitude that makes you realize that you have been blessed. Honor is the satisfaction of being an achiever; it's the pleasure of knowing that faculty and administration feel you are worthy of praise. Honor is pride in the achievement, and a pat on the back for a job well done. Honor is reputation, and the courage to live up to that reputation. But most of all, honor is a sense of well-being and harmony—it's pride, and blessing, and humility and praise all rolled into one.

Teresa Hicks—enthusiastic, carefree yet responsible, dedicated, concerned, a total person, the name conjures up a host of pleasant thoughts. Teresa's achievements at Peace have been numerous and outstanding. The time she has spent here will be remembered not in terms of these tangible rewards, however; but instead by the many and lasting friends she has made. Her ready smile radiates sunshine, inspires confidence, and conveys a genuine love and concern. Teresa has established herself as a leader both on and off the basketball court. More importantly, though, she has become an indispensable friend to everyone here. It is with great pride that I speak of my roommate as "Miss Peace," because I love her, too.

Sports

Competition strikes in every nerve and travels like sharp lightning through your system until your whole body is electrified with the excitement of the situation. Each sense is alert and hopes rise with the flood of expectations. It's a big game—a big match—and lots of people will be watching; every eye is on you to perform.

Soon the big event passes, you've done your best, or you've aspired to try harder next time. Still there's the warm satisfaction of having tried. Winning and losing can be the extreme peaks of a lifetime, but competition is the one bittersweet gap in-between.

"Go Mean Green." It's a familiar phrase that pops up on the front of big, green buttons. It's hope and ambition for the 14 girls who bring honor and achievement to our school through basketball. It's the spirit that unites these talented individuals into a team with one common goal. "Go Mean Green"—It's the spirit that unites a school.

Long, hard hours of gruelling exercise and running. Then 12 young ladies dressed in summer white walk out to the Ragland Tennis Courts and begin their warm-up. The match begins—a slender, tanned arm lifts in graceful motion, and—whamo—the strength of training propels a tennis ball over the net. Under the supervision of Coach Rich Henderson, this is a familiar sight on our courts. The tennis team began its season with a win over Campbell, and since then has brought achievement and pride to our campus.

Organizations

Whoever said "two's company but three's a crowd" didn't know how much fun PSRA playday could be, or Peanut Week, or a host of clubs and organizations we have on the Peace College Campus. Our clubs bring friends together, add a little organization, and the result is fun and companionship.

Teresa Hicks, President

Peace Student Government Association

The Peace Student Government Association centers its activities around one goal: the betterment of the student population at Peace. It makes laws, plans assemblies, discusses activities and problems of students, and is generally concerned about our welfare. By bridging any gap between the students, faculty, and administration, the PSGA also helps make our relationship as the "Peace family" a lot closer. By promoting high moral standards and student participation and cooperation, the PSGA makes Peace a nicer place to live.

We can consider ourselves lucky because music touches our lives in some way everyday, and talented groups such as the Piano Ensemble, Peace Chamber Singers and Choir add even more to the aesthetic value of our environment. Both the Piano Ensemble and Peace Chamber singers are veteran performers, bringing music not only to Peace, but to other scholastic institutions in the surrounding area. The choir also plays a great part in our weekly life at Peace, because it enriches our spiritual growth at Chapel, and as well as at special occasions during the year.

Within there is a Prism that projects,
Never to cease
A warm reflection on the walls of the mind,
The memories of Peace.

Steadily staring down Wilmington Street,
The majesty of Main.
The fountain flowing personalities and characters
In an endless rain.

Peace is not an institution
It's a state of mind,
An advance of the soul and heart
And of ideals left behind.

Peace's specialty can't be defined by pointing
Or by specific mark.
Her specialty lies within her people,
A Prism from every heart.

A Decade of Progress

Since 1963, Peace College has been undergoing a radical change in its physical plant. During this time, seven new buildings have been constructed; the existing campus buildings, Main and East, have been renovated; Dinwiddie Chapel has been remodeled; five tennis courts have been added; and a major portion of the campus has been landscaped. Now, upon completion of the ten-year project, Peace College houses one of the most comfortable, serviceable physical plants around, and for a small, private college, this is quite an accomplishment!

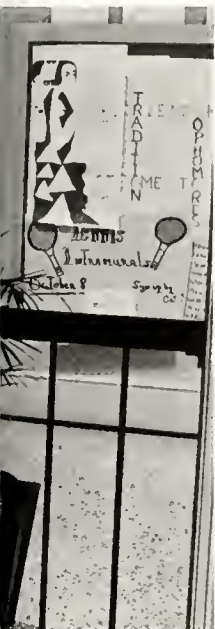

The Hermann Student Center is one of the busiest buildings around. On almost any day, you can find in it a fast-moving basketball game, a lot of slinky modern dancers, a roommate cooking a surprise birthday cake, a pool full of Peace Porpoises, and Ms. Finch, Ms. McCraw, and Mrs. Cochran. The Hermann Student Center, completed in 1963, is the generous gift of Mr. Grover M. Hermann, one of the country's leading industrialists. Directly behind the center is the athletic field which provides the students with space for softball, field hockey, archery, badminton, and (among other things) a powder puff football game. The Ragland Tennis Courts, also situated around the Hermann Student Center, set the stage for many Peace College tennis matches, and lots of springy "tennis" evenings when everybody's ready to stretch their winter-worn muscles and feel some sun on their shoulders.

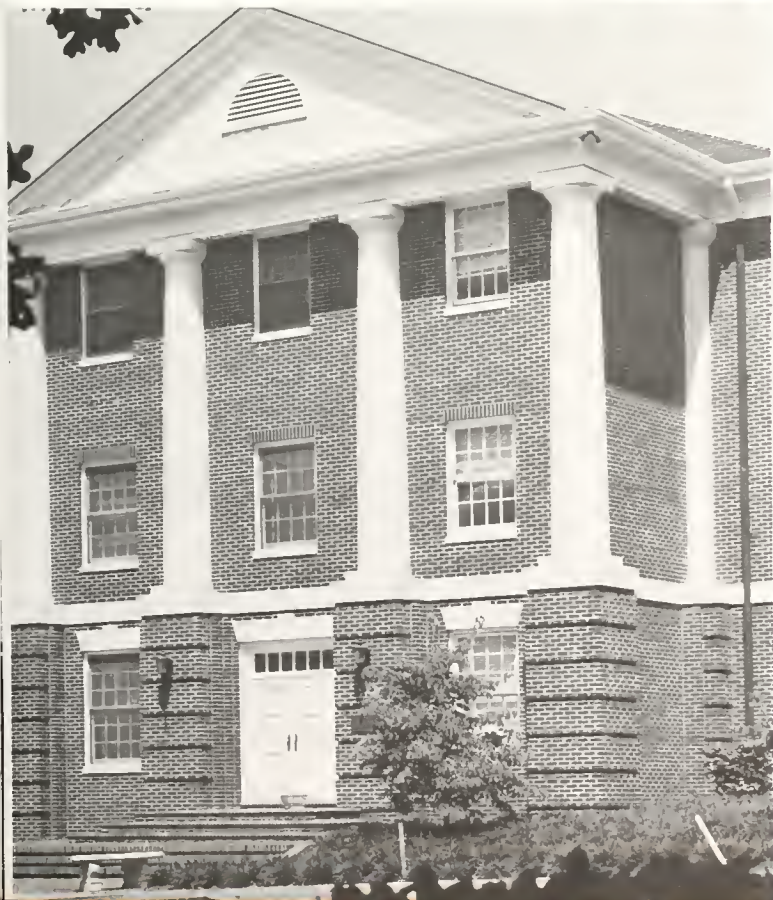

In 1964, the William C. Pressly Arts and Science Building replaced a huge, white house that had formerly been the center of art and science instruction at Peace. Pressly contains modern biology and chemistry labs, French and Spanish language labs, a home economics instruction complex, art labs, faculty offices, and numerous classrooms. Three years later, in 1967, Belk Hall was completed, and since then has become a center for laughter and companionship; there's no better way to enjoy a meal than with your friends. Belk also contains the private dining room, the student bookstore, a large lounging area, complete with TV and soap operas, and the post office—a vital link with Mama, Daddy, and the boy back home.

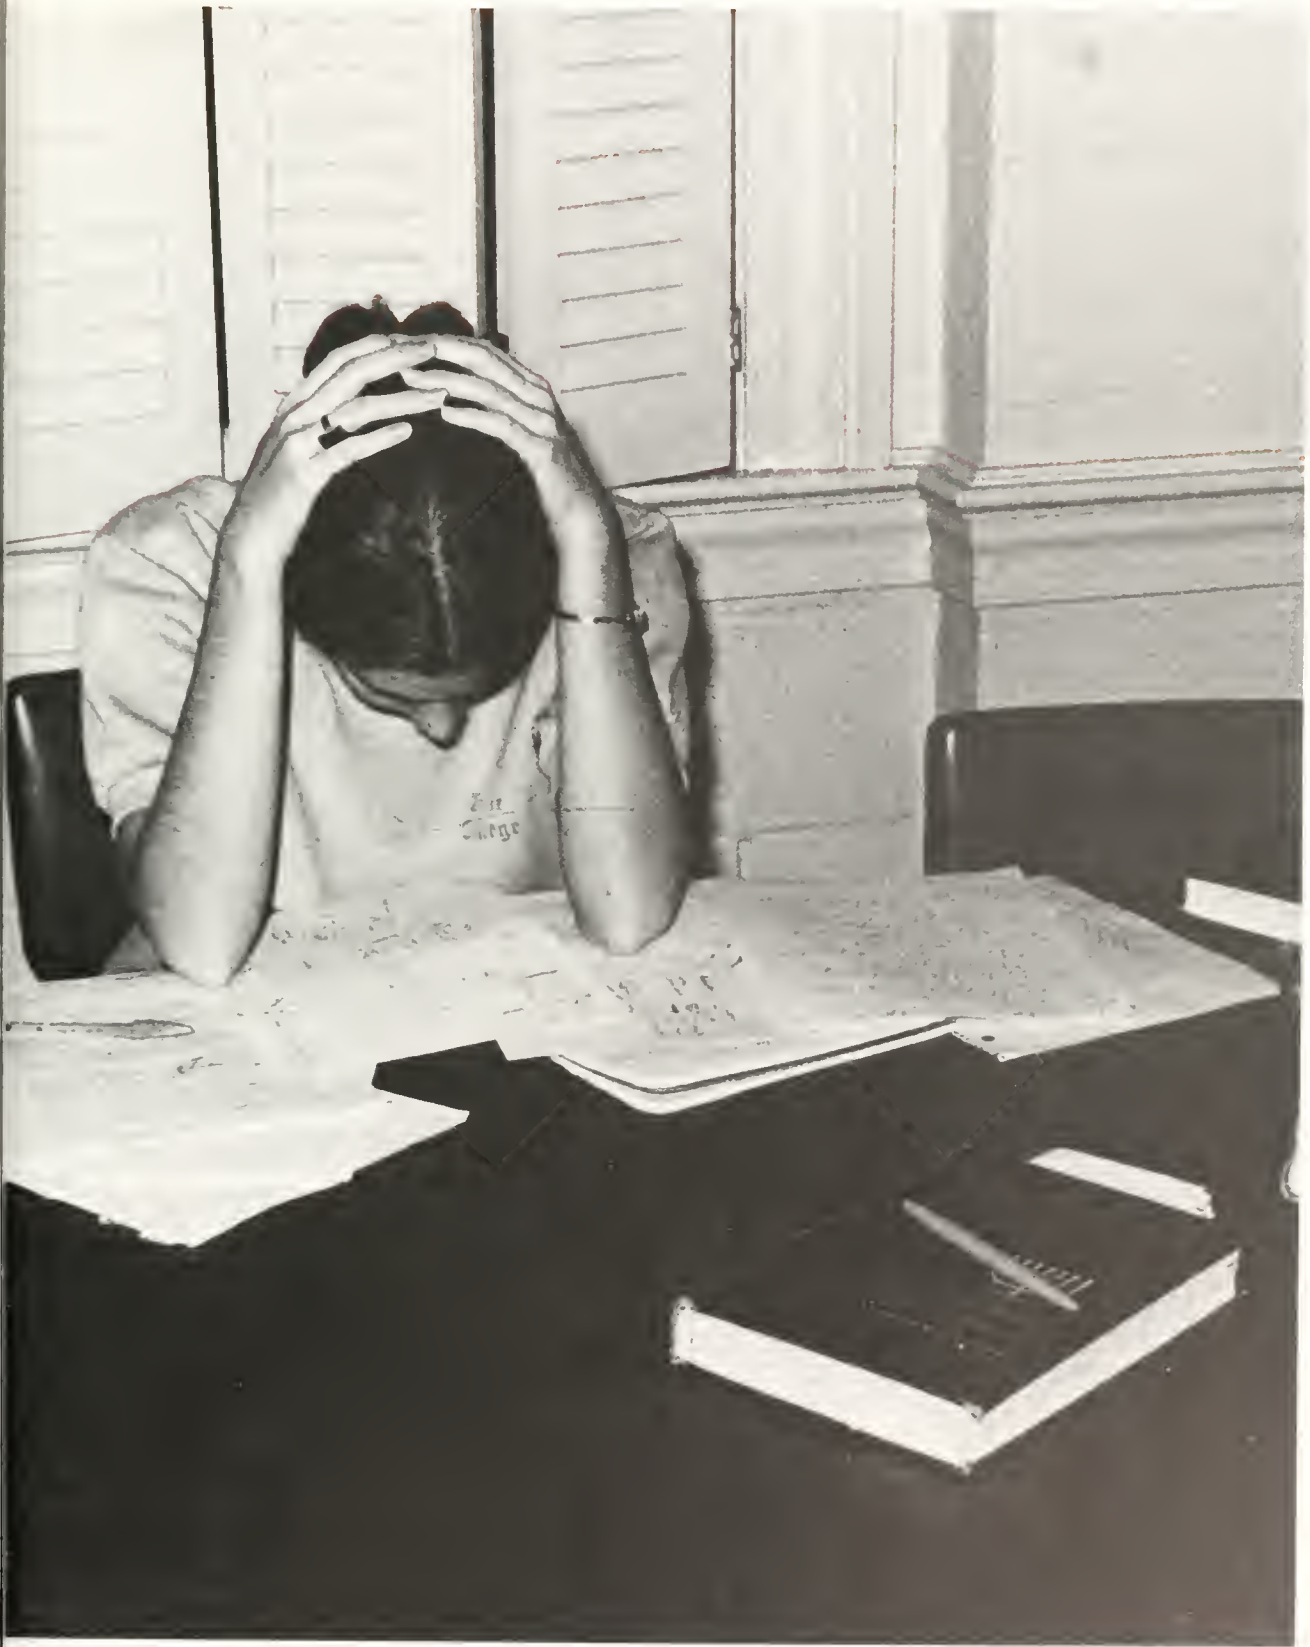

With the addition of Finley and Ross, and the renovation of Main and East, Peace College was able to house comfortably 400 girls ready for shaving cream fights and birthday parties. The plant could handle everything from dancing in the newly established Little Theatre, to meditation in Dinwiddie Chapel. Finally, with the completion of the Lucy Cooper Finch Library and the Browne-McPherson Music Building, the ten-year project had been finished, and in the words of Mr. Gene Lilley, "The dream of '62 had become a reality." But the importance of the buildings at Peace College comes not from the brick or the stone, or from the ground they are built on, but from the warmth of the people they house, and from the learning experiences they facilitate.

... If a college doesn't teach a man to think his own thoughts and speak his own mind, it doesn't teach him anything of prime importance. Oh, he may accumulate any amount of book-learning; he may be fluent in seventeen languages including the Etruscan; he may be able to square the circle But if he comes out of college without the capacity to form an opinion of the way the world is going, and the nerve to stand on that opinion in the face of stout opposition, he remains an ignoramus, though his degrees may take up half the letters of the alphabet.

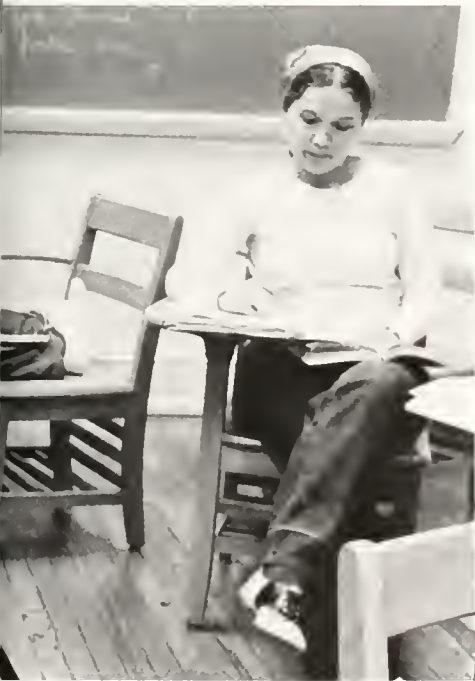

Gerald W. Johnson
Wakes Forest College
Class of 1911

With a student-faculty ratio of 19-1, learning became almost a one-to-one correspondence. Many times I hurried down to the first floor of Main to catch one of my teachers before she left for the weekend, but there was always time for me—always time for my problem. At Peace I found that learning took place not only in the classroom, but on front campus, off campus, in lab, at Halifax Court, in small, informal discussions. Learning became integrated into my daily life; it became vital and alive, not merely staid and factual.

"On my honor as a Peace College student, I will not lie, cheat or steal, nor will I condone the actions of those who do."

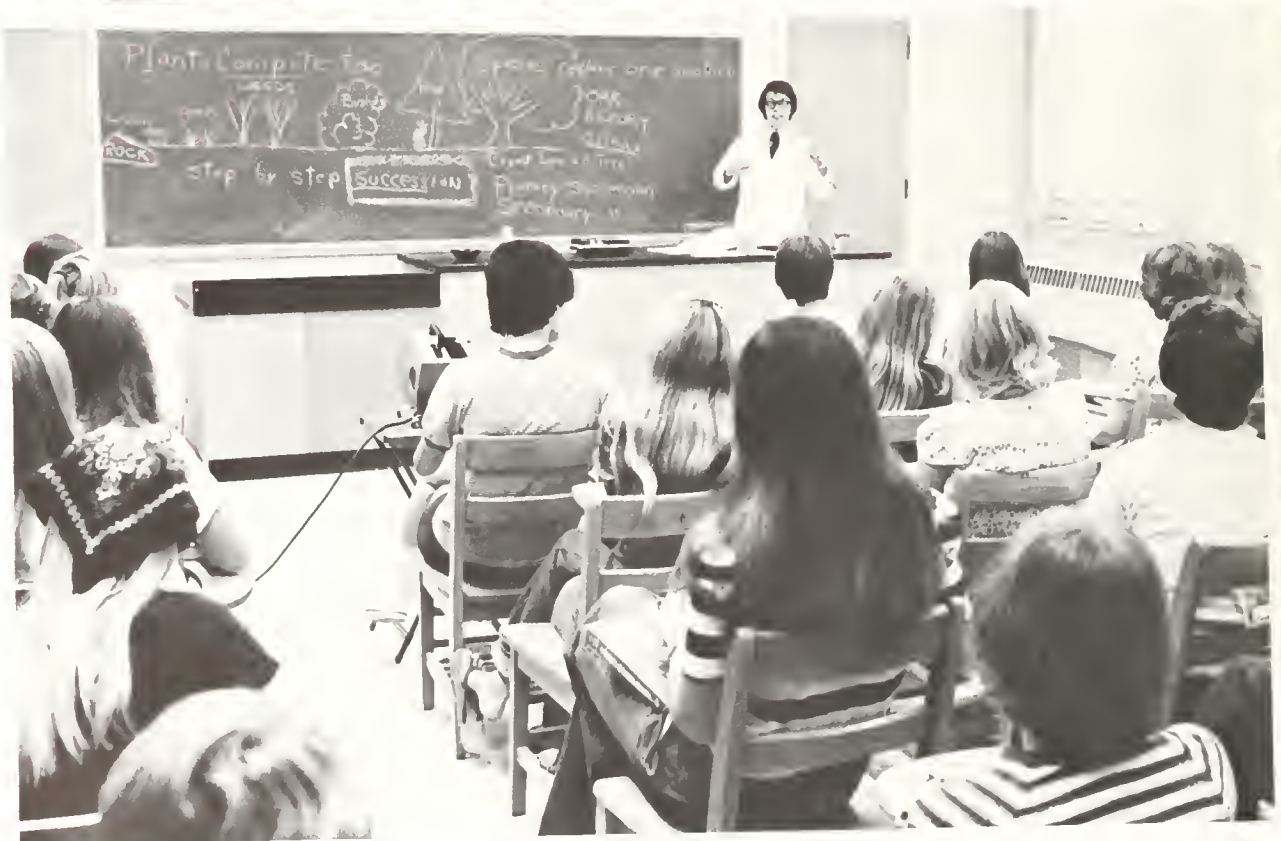

"I shall ever thank God that in that troubled hour of trial . . ., I had the courage to be true to my oath and conscience."

Robert Taft

Sometimes when I read this quote, I wonder if Robert Taft was left in a room by himself with his textbook and a test full of unanswered questions. When faced with that kind of temptation, you learn what your morals are made of. But the Honor Code acted as a kind of insurance against temptation. In it, I found sound faith, honesty, and trust—a sense of being able to trust my next door neighbor and myself. Only with this kind of trust can you learn to like yourself and the people you live with.

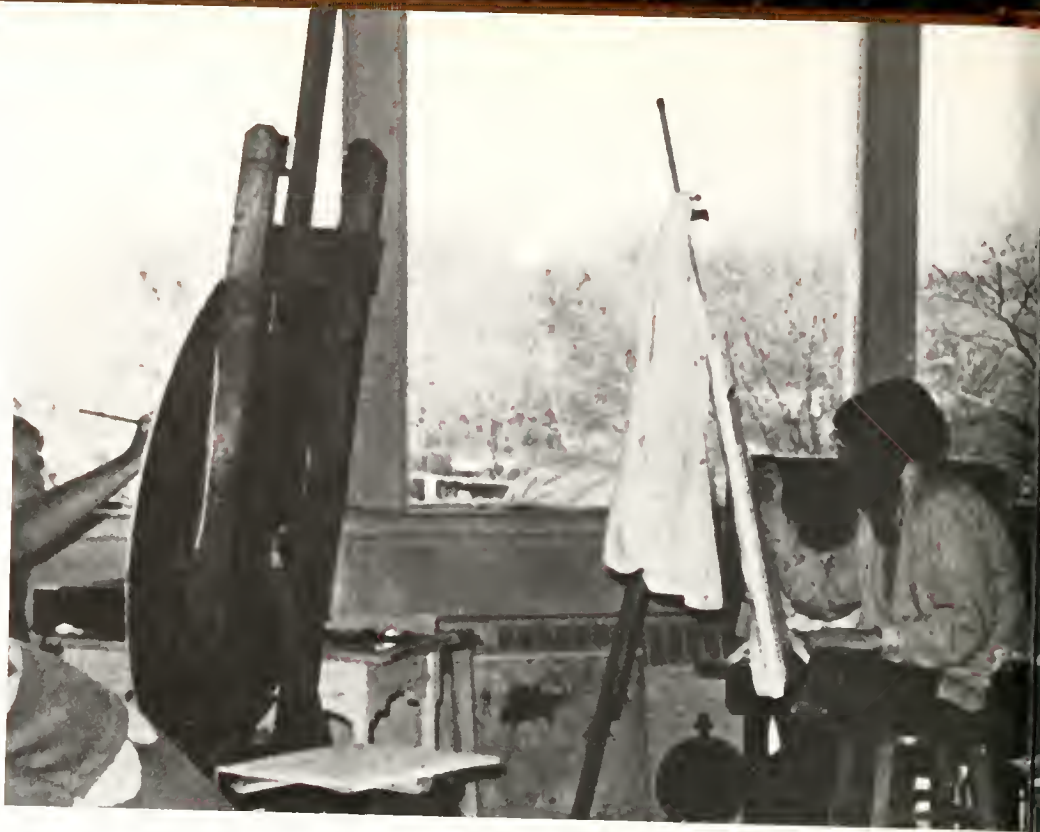

I used to think that lab was dull and smelly, but lab became a unique learning experience. It was laughter over somebody's burned biscuits, somebody's dead paramecium, or somebody's shattered test tube. But most of all, it was trial and error—discovery in the truest sense. When I first walked into biology lab, I never knew I'd learn anything that would be of use to me outside the classroom. But when Dr. Miller introduced me to bathtub beer and yogurt, biology suddenly found a place in my interests. Terrariums became "growable" and, believe me, my thumb was anything but green. Home Ec. lab and Mrs. Kincaid prepared me to take my place among the domestic world, and Dr. Purrington and the chemistry lab helped me to understand, in some small way, the makeup of my universe.

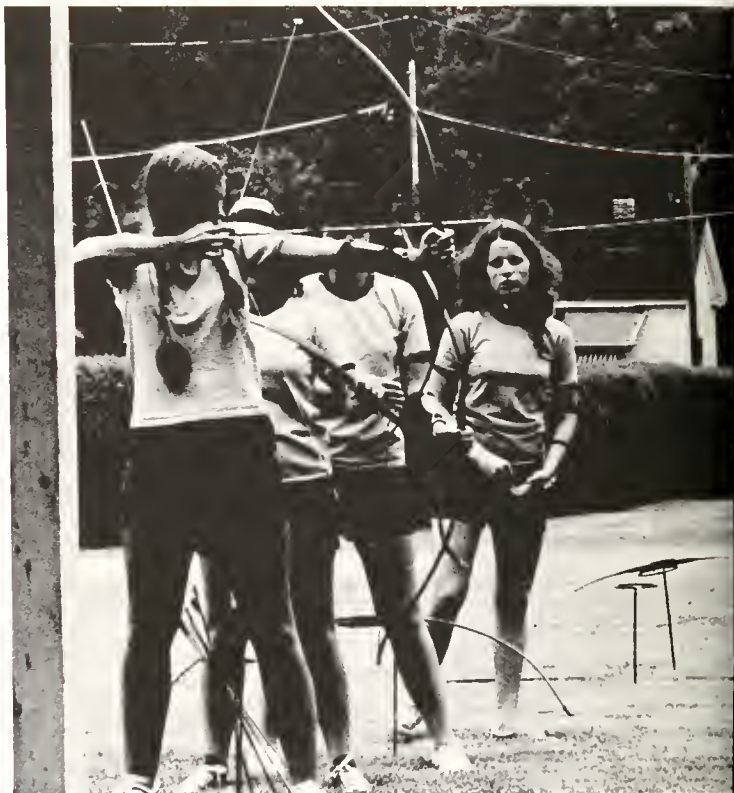

Self-expression emerges in many forms—music, literature, art—It's a way of letting the world know that you're very alive and very creative in your own personal way. Peace College lets you experiment with your expression in all of these areas, but perhaps the Art Department appeals most to our need for a hobby—a craft—to make our leisure time more relaxing and more profitable. Through guidance in painting, ceramics, basket-weaving and lineoleum block printing, each of us can develop a skill while having fun. After all, who has forgotten the satisfaction gained from squishing wet mud between your fingers, or from creating an original masterpiece with your first paint box?

A popular student once said, "At Peace College, they want to make sure you know how to do two things before you graduate: swim and read the Bible." As a result the physical education department at Peace believes that it's just as important to have a well-developed body as a well-developed mind, and they offer everything from archery to water-safety instruction. But, some mornings it was awfully hard to make myself put on my swimsuit and jump in the pool when it was 40° outside and 20° in the water. Nevertheless, exercise makes you feel better, and sometimes it can even make you look better. Anyway, after a semester in Ms. McCraw's physical fitness class, I didn't stumble over as many of the uneven bricks on front campus.

UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

The Cooperating Raleigh Colleges Program gives students in Raleigh colleges and universities an opportunity to gain from each learning center's facilities. Any course not offered at Peace can be taken at State, Meredith, St. Mary's, Shaw, or St. Augustine with no extra charge, and it transfers as if it were taken here. One special benefit of the Cooperating Raleigh Colleges Program is that it enables students to use libraries with a greater variety of holdings. On the outbreak of my first term paper, I panicked for a lack of resources, but the CRC program came to my rescue. My "unfindable" books suddenly appeared from the deep, dark depths of the book stacks in the D.H. Hill Library at NCSU. Occasionally the CRC program offers joint concerts, lectures, and programs, and almost every semester, ten to thirty girls benefit from Peace's membership in the CRC program.

"Liberalism implies particularly freedom of thought, freedom from orthodox dogma, the right of others to think differently from one's self. It implies a free mind, open to new ideas and willing to give attentive consideration . . . When I say liberty, I mean liberty of the individual to think his own thoughts and live his his own life as he desires to think and live." Robert A. Taft.

Be free.
Be whatever you are.
Do whatever you want to do,
Just so long as you don't hurt anybody.
And remember . . .
I am your friend.

Friends

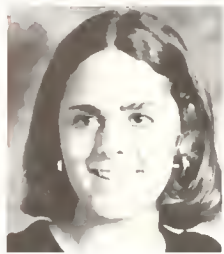

I remember when I went home for Christmas my Freshman year, it felt kinda funny not to have to sneak around so I wouldn't wake up my roommate, or turn down my radio when she was trying to study, or pick up my clothes when I finished taking a shower. I actually missed her! Come to think about it, I missed everybody on the hall! It just wasn't the same to walk outside and not see the same familiar faces—the same familiar smiles. In one short semester I had grown so close to those people, it seemed as if they had been my friends since grade school. But there's one nice thing about the friends I made at Peace: they will be my friends for life, because in two short years, we packed more joy, more sorrow, more living into our friendship than most people have a chance to experience in a lifetime. Through all my tomorrows, there will never be any happier memories than those of my friends.

In 1973, two years seemed like such a long time; but as our days here Peace grow fewer and fewer, it seems only yesterday that we suffered through orientation, handbook tests, and beanies. It is our hope that through the Lotus, we have been able not only to record events that have made this year, but to record the emotions and vitality that were the moment.

No great project can be done alone, so we wish to extend a special thanks to the Lotus staff, Fred Jones, who took pictures endlessly, Kittie McGee, Janice Powers, and Brenda Bullock, who spent extra hours in the publications room helping us to meet deadlines, to the teachers in Main who always had encouraging and cheerful words to say, especially to Mrs. Janet Wester, who gave us time, guidance, and encouragement, and understanding, and finally to the student body of Peace College without whom there would have been nothing to record or to remember.

So, it is with a great deal of pride and relief that we present the 1975 Lotus to you in hopes that it will enable you to happily remember your years at Peace College.

Our Dedication To ...

Mr. Paul Johnson

Everyone needs a man at some time in her life, but from Monday to Thursday, Peace College seems almost a man-forsaken place, except for a few of this rare species who regularly roam the halls and grounds. But there is one man who never goes unnoticed; a man who has touched the hearts and minds of thousands of girls over the years. He is a special friend to all of us in his own special way; in an environment without Daddies, he is the Daddy of us all, because his strong, quiet exuberance and optimism make a hard day easier, and a happy day happier. He does some of the hardest, most thankless jobs on campus; replacing light bulbs, fixing door knobs, adjusting window screens, and keeping us warm, and he takes very good care of us. So, by dedicating the 1975 Lotus to him—with the utmost appreciation and a great, great deal of love—the Sophomore Class wants to thank Mr. Paul Johnson for his unflinching love for us, and his unflinching love for life.

Art by Maria Willoughby, age eleven, Raleigh, N.C.

Everyone's interested in conserving our natural resources. And there's something we can all do to help—use all forms of energy wisely including electricity. That simply means use all the electricity you need without wasting any.

Cutting the lights out when you leave the room is a good place to begin. In fact, turning off any appliances you're not using is a good idea—like the television, radio, or hairdryer. Not wasting hot water when you bathe or wash clothes helps, too.

We are working to find new and better ways of providing the electricity needed to keep our area growing. But you can help by using only the energy you need.

PEACE COLLEGE is a junior college for women located in the capital of North Carolina. Striving for excellence in every facet of the total educational program, Peace places emphasis on the liberal arts.

Affiliated with the Presbyterian Church and fully accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, the college was founded in 1857 and opened in 1872.

Peace grants two degrees, the Associate of Arts and the Associate of Science in Business degrees.

The curriculum includes concentrations in art, dramatics, economics, English, history, home economics, education, journalism, language, mathematics, music, physical education, political science, psychology, science, social studies, sociology and speech.

The pre-professional programs are pre-nursing, pre-medical, pre-dentistry, pre-medical technology and pre-pharmacy.

Two programs lead to business degrees, one with a specialization in secretarial courses and another in accounting. The one-year certificate program in business consists of training concentrated in either secretarial science or accounting with credits applicable towards a bachelor's degree.

Peace is

A woman's college with a rich heritage,
A complete academic program
And a Christian community.
